Former Local Doctor Honored

the United States and elsewhere. This was in addition to the strictly surgical work of attending to the wounded. The hospital at La Panna, being the only one near the front, with accommodations for 2,000 persons at a time, was the first station to which the wounded were taken.

The object was to get the hospital emptied every morning, to make room for the war victims, who were certain to come in during the afternoon. Accordingly treatments were given soldiers with arms and legs shot away and then the men were sent back from the base hospital to other hospitals. To accomplish this, and at the same time give proper attention to the wounded, required infinite care, detailed organization and expert surgical knowledge. It was this expedition and attention that first attracted the attention of Dr. LePage, chief surgeon to the king.

Letters received by Dr. Morrow's father have told the story of the decoration. It came so suddenly and unexpectedly that the young man was almost scared.

It was on March 24 that he received the decoration. He was busy at the hospital attending to the multifarious duties of looking after the wounded, when a messenger touched Morrow on the arm and said that Dr. DePage wanted to see him at once at his villa. Dr. Morrow knew the venerable Belgian was suffering from an infected thumb, and thought he desired him to look at it. Inasmuch as the doctor had almost "adopted" Morrow, he hastened to the villa.

A maid showed him into the doctor's bedroom. He walked toward the bed in the half light, and started to speak a cheery word to the patient.

Suddenly he perceived that others were in the room also. He turned and came face to face with the king.

The monarch advanced toward him, extended his hand and began speaking rapidly. Morrow could hardly believe his ears when the royal lips uttered words of praise for his efforts in behalf of Belgium. At the end of his remarks, the king placed upon Morrow's breast the decoration of chevalier of the Order of Leopold, the highest honor in the gift of the Belgian people.

Morrow is the first foreigner to wear this honor, which hitherto has been reserved for the great Belgians—men of arms, of scholarship, of scientific attainment. It virtually confers upon him the rank of nobility.

Young Dr. Morrow "came to" at last and expressed his thanks to the king for the honor which was so unprecedented and unlooked for.

The chevaliers of the Order of Leopold meet once in ten years in the old church at Ghent, each being reserved a permanent seat in that ancient edifice. Attendance at these decennials is compulsory for all chevaliers who are in the country. Dr. Morrow wrote his father that he was glad he would be out of the country at the next decennial, because the formal suits the chevaliers must wear would cost him many hundreds of dollars.

Since his recall from Belgium, which came in mid-March, Dr. Morrow has been in Paris taking some advanced surgical work at a leading hospital.

Moving Pictures

As "The Foundling," one of the most sweetly pathetic characters she has ever impersonated on the screen, the incomparable Mary Pickford surpasses herself. The foundling is the daughter of a struggling artist, at whose birth her mother dies. Because of his wonderful love for his wife, the artist hates the child that caused her death, and gives the baby girl to a mothering heart who cares for it. The tragedy of his wife's death brings to the artist the master touch he has so long sought, and in the years that follow he wins fame and fortune. But in the sunset of life, he realizes its emptiness and futility, and yearns for the return of the child he had driven from his heart. She in the meantime has drifted through a strange and varying life. How the threads of destiny unite these parted souls, bringing to each its first genuine happiness, is absorbingly unfolded in this unique photoplay. This five reel production will be shown at the Star theater tonight only.

Julia Heinrich

Soprano of the Metropolitan, the find of the year in opera, singing in direct comparison with Edison's re-creation of her voice, to illustrate that one is identical with the other.

Miss Heinrich is but one of the many great artists who have thus proven that Edison has accomplished his ambition to re-create music so perfectly that his re-creation cannot be distinguished from the original.

Hear Edison's re-creation of Julia Heinrich's sympathetic voice. Hear Miss Heinrich herself at the Metropolitan, in New York or when she is on concert tour.

We are licensed to demonstrate Edison's new invention

The NEW EDISON

This new instrument embodies a new art, the culmination of Edison's research work in chemistry and acoustics and the expenditure by him of more than two million dollars in experiments alone. The Laboratory formulae and methods are known only to Edison and a few of his trusted assistants. No single assistant knows ALL of the formulae and methods by which Edison actually

We want to lay especial stress on the quality of our mutton and lamb. A trial will convince you that we have made no exaggerations.
